

SUBSCRIBE TO OUR NEWSLETTER

THE WAR
ON CARS

EPISODES

PATREON

ABOUT

ADVERTISE

STORE

LIFE AFTER CARS: THE BOOK

142. Congestion Pricing Is Finally Here

January 14, 2025

☐ No Comments

SUBSCRIBE TO OUR NEWSLETTER

THE WAR
ON CARS

EPISODES

PATREON

ABOUT

ADVERTISE

STORE

LIFE AFTER CARS: THE BOOK

At last, New York City started its congestion pricing program on January 5.

We knew that the local mainstream press would be out in force interviewing drivers and elevating the voices of those who were against the toll. We knew that because the New York press corps has a long history of putting the people who commute by car in New York above those who don't.

So we went out on congestion pricing's first weekday morning and talked to some people who weren't driving. Some of the people we talked with were random New Yorkers, but mostly we heard from advocates who knew we would be there and showed up in the freezing cold to talk about why they were so excited about the launch of this historic program.

Thank you to all the people who spared some of their time on a cold morning to talk to us, especially Samir Lavingia, Charlie Todd, Chris Sanders, Alex Duncan, Rich Miller, Noel Hidalgo, Seth Solomonow, Kirby Kersels, Paul Krikler and Steve from Peekskill.

This episode was edited by Ali Lemer.

You can find the full transcript of this episode here.

 Support The War on Cars on Patreon and receive exclusive access to bonus content, ad-free versions of regular episodes, free stickers, merch discounts, early access to live shows, and more. ***

EPISODES PATREON ABOUT ADVERTISE STORE
LIFE AFTER CARS: THE BOOK

