

UDOT unveils plans to expand southern Utah's already-sprawling bike paths, linking to rest of state

Someday, determined cyclists could pedal on protected paths from red rock country to Bear Lake.

(Trent Nelson | The Salt Lake Tribune) A cyclist rides along a path next to State Route 18 north of St. George on Wednesday, Sept. 17, 2025. Under a new state-led plan, southern Utah could see its robust network of trails expanded.

By  Jose Davila IV | Nov. 10, 2025, 8:00 a.m. | Updated: 11:14 a.m.

This website utilizes technologies such as cookies to enable essential site functionality, as well as for analytics, personalization, and targeted advertising. To learn more, view the following link: Privacy Policy

Manage Preferences

State officials want to make those scenarios a reality.

Last month, the Utah Department of Transportation published its first map of a planned statewide regional bike system known as the Utah Trail Network. The web of paved, protected multiuse paths — think of it as a freeway system for cyclists, walkers and joggers — would include connections from Cedar City to Hildale and Veyo to Toquerville.

Archived articles older than 30 days are only available to donors.

Have an active subscription or donation? Log in here.

Want access? Donate today.

A donation of any amount will unlock access to the sltrib.com archive for a year. While sltrib.com is now free to read, we still need the support of donors like you to power our nonprofit newsroom. Want more benefits? You can learn more about membership benefits by level of giving here.

Monthly

Annual

Want to increase your support? Donors who pledge $1,200 and over per year can join the First Amendment Society. Learn more here.

Offers may vary by account.
Already a member? Sign in here.

The Salt Lake Tribune, Inc. is an exempt organization as described in Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code; EIN 84-1878709. Your contribution is tax-deductible to the extent allowed by law.

RELATED STORIES

This website utilizes technologies such as cookies to enable essential site functionality, as well as for analytics, personalization, and targeted advertising. To learn more, view the following link: Privacy Policy

Washington County approves Utah’s first regional water conservation plan. Here’s how much it could save.

MOST VIEWED

- 1 University of Utah agrees to $15,000 settlement over fan’s ejection from BYU-Utah game
- 2 Who is St. George’s namesake? A larger-than-life LDS apostle who never lived there and remains an enigma.

Utah is 1st state to join Trump’s addiction recovery program. Here’s what we know so far.

5 Jana Riess: When DNA tests find skeletons in your family’s closet, these LDS researchers want to know about it

Sponsored Story

A month to (re)discover Utah’s Jordan River

Sponsored: In September, the Jordan River Parkway will again become the gathering place for community and culture during the annual Get To The River Festival.

FROM THE WEB

Jose Davila IV

West-side communities reporter

Jose Davila IV covers west-side communities and is a Report for America corps member. He previously worked for KUNR Public Radio in Reno, The Toledo Blade and the Yale Daily News. He appreciates tips on the west side's best food, great hikes across the state and pickup volleyball games. Es bilingüe y ama los tostones de su padre más que nada.

CONNECT

MEMBERSHIP

ABOUT US

TERMS OF SERVICE

PRIVACY POLICY

EDITORIAL POLICY

NEWS TIPS

ADVERTISE

CONTACT US/HELP

MEET THE EDITORIAL BOARD

GIFT ACCEPTANCE POLICY

DONATE

SUPPORTERS FAQ

PRINT FAQ

PRINT EDITION

EMAIL NEWSLETTERS

JOIN THE FIRST AMENDMENT SOCIETY

SUPPORT THE TRIBUNE

SHARE YOUR OPINION

COOKIE PREFERENCES

Report a missed paper by emailing missedpaper@tribunemedia.com or calling 800-426-9000

For e-edition questions or comments, contact customer support at 800-426-9000 or email e-edition@tribunemedia.com

The Salt Lake Tribune