

View PDF

Download full issue

Highlights

- There is a 0.5 elasticity ratio between induced road traffic over five years and capacity change based on the average of 8 major capacity changes of Budapest bridges.
- The elasticity ratio of induced road traffic to capacity change has been relatively stable over the 55 years long analysis period.
- Capacity reduction has a similarly strong effect on travel demand (suppressed traffic) as capacity extension.